12.10.1 The proclaimed speed is a speed which the Provider uses in their commercial communication, including the advertisement and marketing in relation to the promotion of offers of services for accessing the Internet, including the specification of the service parameters in the price list and the Agreement (hereinafter the "Proclaimed Speed"). If it is not clearly specified which speed it is, then it is the Proclaimed Speed.

12.10.2 The maximal speed is a speed which the Subscriber may expect to have available when accessing the service at least once a day, namely between 00:00 and 24:00 (hereinafter the “Maximal Speed”). Unless specified otherwise, the Proclaimed Speed equals the Maximal Speed.

12.10.3 The commonly available speed is a speed which is available to the Subscriber

- a) when connecting with guaranteed parameters at the level of minimally 90% of the Maximal Speed for minimally 90% of each continuous 4-hour interval;
- b) during other connections – at the level of minimally 60% of the Maximal Speed for minimally 60% of each continuous 24-hour interval.

12.10.4 The minimal speed is a speed which occurs:

- a) when connecting with guaranteed parameters at minimally 80% of the Maximal Speed;
- b) during other connections – at 20% of the Maximal Speed (hereinafter the “Minimal Speed”).

12.11 When providing the service, deviations from the Proclaimed Speed may occur. If the service reaches the Maximal Speed, the commonly available speed and the Minimal Speed, this does not constitute any defects to the Service. The Subscriber shall have the opportunity to take into account the deviations from the Proclaimed Speed when selecting the Service and select such a Service for which the permitted deviation from the Proclaimed Speed will not represent an obstacle for the use and provision of applications and services through the Service.

- c) the functionality of the special applications and services, which require a certain speed of connection, may be limited.

12.13 The speed of the communication towards the terminal points on the Internet depends on the speed of connection of the terminal points to the Internet, their current load, the loss rate of packets and the network latency. Therefore, the Provider is not responsible for not reach the given speed when it comes to terminal points on the Internet. The Provider is responsible for the maintaining the speed at the point of the Interface.

12.14 If the Service includes a limited volume of data, then their transfer may lead based on the character of the Service to the decrease in the speed of the Service and/or to the limitation of the access to the Internet via the service. The speed of the Service and/or the access to the Internet via the Services shall be restored automatically by the expiration of a specified period or after paying the relevant fee if this option is supported by the given Service.

If the Subscriber noticed a decrease in the qualitative parameters of the Services as for the delivery interface, the given fact may be caused expressly as a result of the under-dimensioning of the qualitative parameters of the Services on the part of the Subscriber which is subject of the Agreement. In such a case, the Subscriber is not entitled to consider such a state as a Malfunction. The given fact may be removed in cooperation with the Provider expressly by increasing the qualitative parameters of the Service on the basis of concluding a new contractual relationship between the Provider and the Subscriber.

If the Provider uncovers that its SIM card became subject to an organized re-sale to further people who do not have their residence on the territory of the Czech Republic or any permanent relation to the Czech Republic, with the purpose to facilitate the use of the EU roaming for other purposes than regular travelling, the Provider is entitled to adopt immediate adequate measures to ensure rectification of the situation (e.g. in the form of suspending the services provided in the roaming, etc.) and informs the Subscriber of such a conduct without undue delay.
- viii. In the case of data services of the ha-loo mobil, the Provider is entitled as part of the policy to proportionately use the services within the meaning of Article 8 of the Terms and Conditions to limit the use of these services in the EU roaming to a volume which minimally equals the volume which is calculated as a share of the remaining credit without the VAT as of the moment when the roaming commenced and the regulated maximal wholesale prices for the roaming specified in the EU Regulation.
- ix. Besides the requirements specified in Article 8 of the Terms and Conditions in case of providing data services (the so-called open data packages which are defined under the EU Regulation as such data services for which the data limit is not specified or which use a unit price which is calculated from the price of the given tariff or the package divided by the assigned data limit lower than the wholesale price specified in the EU Regulation), the Provider is entitled to specify for the use of these services in the EU roaming special data limits (hereinafter the “EU Data Limits”). The EU Data Limit is a double of the share of the price of the Home-Country Tariff without the VAT and the wholesale price for the regulated roaming data services which is specified in the EU Regulation. The specific amount of the EU Data Limit is specified in the valid Services Price List or the Subscriber had been informed about it in the Billing of the Services. The Subscriber is informed about using up the EU Data Limit via an informational SMS. If the EU Data Limit is lower than the data limit included in the Home-Country Tariff, then the Provider is entitled to charge towards the Subscriber a surcharge in the amount specified in the valid Services Price List and for the data consumed above the EU Data Limit up to the amount of the data limit included in the Home-Country Tariff, and the Subscriber is then not possible to use the EU roaming anymore or to use it with a lowered speed in accordance with the setting of the Home-Country Tariff (in such a case, the Provider is entitled to charge towards the Subscriber a surcharge in the amount specified in the valid Services Price List) or he/she can purchase repeatedly an individual additional data limit, in accordance with the conditions of the Home-Country Tariff (hereinafter the “Home-Country Billing Mechanism”). If the EU Data Limit is higher than the limit included in the Home-Country Limit, then after the consumption of the limit included in the Home-Country Tariff, the Home-Country Billing Mechanism is activated up to the amount of the EU Data Limit and then the Provider is entitled to charge the Subscriber with a surcharge in the amount specified in the valid Services Price List, and based on the roaming data consumption.
- x. The Provider is also entitled to charge towards the Subscriber the surcharges in the amount specified in the valid Services Price List, provided that such a process is expressly approved by the Czech Telecommunication Authority, while in such a case are these surcharges charged for all the services provided in the EU roaming without any limitation.
